How to set up an email group in Gmail mobile app

Since mobile apps are what most people use on a daily basis, you might be asking how to set up an email group in Gmail using the mobile app. The short answer is that you can't because the Gmail app is quite limited. However, there is also a way to get this done using an app.

To do this, simply login to your Gmail mobile app and on the menu option look for contacts. On mobile, if you click on contacts, you will be redirected to a contact app on Google Play marketplace if you use an Android device or App Store for iPhone users. If the contact app is already installed on your device, it will simply pop up. The contact mobile app is where you can create an email group if you decide to create one using a mobile device.

The method of creating a contact group on the contact app is the same as the steps above.